In recent years, neurovascular surgery has been going through an identity crisis.

The fast evolution of endovascular techniques has undermined the traditional therapeutic treatments in AVM, Aneurysms and dural arterio-venous Fistulas. Surgery on the other hand, has benefitted from this conflict and the invasiveness has been significantly reduced as a result.

Nowadays, the approaches offered vary depending on the medical centre and the different approaches used in various centers often confuse patients. We think that in this transitional world it is necessary to periodically take stock of the situation, and to objectively compare experiences in order to evolve together.

The aim of this course is to start a dynamic and iterative development path in the cerebrovascular field, together with other reference centres, both at national and at international level. By trying to give an answer to the well known and evident fragmentation of the pathology, we aim to reach common objectives, recommendations and above all results.
